India Flood Toll Near 900; 4 Cities Still Threatened

NEW DELHI, Sept. 7 (UPI) — Monsoon floods in oorthern and eastern India have killed at least 898 persons and damaged crops worth $114 million, officials said today.

They said that a vast area is still under water and the death toll is expected to go beyond 1,000. The officials said the floods have also drowned about 3,900 head of cattle,

The flooding of New Delhi by the Yamuna River is about over, but the Yamuna and the Ganges are threatening four large Indian cities, the officials said.

Although the level of the Yamuna, which crested 15 feet above flood stage at New Delhi, has dropped by more than a foot there, its waters threatened Agra, 140 miles to the south, bome of the Taj Mahal. Officials said the Taj Mahal itself was safe, however, because it sits

All India Radio reported today that the Ganges breached the I6th-century embankment at Allahabad, 350 miles southeast of New Delhi, and flooded several sections of the city.

"The situation on the bank of the Ganges is serious and grave," the hroadcast said. It said much of the city of Banares was flooded. Further south, the Ganges also threatened Patna, capital of Bihar state. A 300-mile stretch of land along the Ganges from Allahabad to Bhagalpur in Bihar Ganges was flooded, officials said, and thousands of acres of farmland were under 4 to 5 feet of water.

"The damage is colossal," said an Irrigation Ministry official. Army troops, police and rescue workers moved nearly 300,000 Delhi area residents to higher ground. The majority were being housed in tenements and school buildings.

The government denied a report that a 10-mile-long embankment protecting Shahdra, a suburb of 1 million people across the Yamuna from New Delhi, had been breached.

'Let's See It Through Together'

By R.W. Apple Jr.

LONDON, Sept. 7 (NYT) —
Prime Minister James Callaghan
sprang one of the higgest political surprises of the postwar era oo the Briosh public tonight by announc-ing that there would not be a general election in the oear future.

In a hrief television speech, the prime minister said that the present Labor government would carry on because we are doing what is best for Britain," He conceded that without a majority in the House of Commons, and without the guaranteed support of the Liberal Party, he would be "more vulnerable to defeats" in Parliament. But he argued vigorously that an election this fall would solve nothing. "Let's see it through together," Mr. Callaghan told the nation in a dramatic live broadcast from his office at 10 Downing Street. British governments hold office for a maximum of five years, so the prime minister can, if he wishes, put the election off until Oct. 10, 1979. But it had been predicted by almost every politician and almost every commentator that he would go to the country on either Sept. 28 or Oct. 5 this year, in the hope of capitalizing on improvement in the British economy.

Advertising Campaigns

Every national newspaper had predicted or flatly stated that an election was imminent. One of the senior members of the Cabinet told friends last week that the decision was "not quite set in concrete, but almost." All three parties had already begun advertising campaigns and had assembled campaign

The leaders of the opposition parties expressed astonishment and some irritation at Mr. Callaghan's decision to soldier on.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally and his wife Nellie testifying at House Select Committee on Assassinations Wednesday.

Connallys Describe 'Silent, Terrible Ride' of Dallas

By George Lardner Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (WP) - "There was no screaming in that horrible car." Nellie Connally recalled emphatically of the moments after the shotwere fired. "It was just a silent, terrible ride. Our husbands were dying in our arms."

Quietly but vividiv, as though it had just happened former Texas Gov. John Connally and his wife appeared yesterday before the House Select Commitice on Assassinations to recount the murder of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

It was the first time that the Coooallys, who had been riding with President and Mrs. Kennedy that day in the fatal motorcade, had testified publicly noder oath. The Warren Commission, whose penchant for secrecy belped give rise to the current inquiry. beard from them only in executive session, spending less than an hour with the governor and only five minutes with his wife.

For nearly three bours yesterday, they relived every moment, differing on some points, slightly revising others that assassination critics undoubtedly will seize upon and dispute for years to come.

Doubts Rumors Will End

Mr. Connally said that he was sure his testimony would fail to stop the speculation and dispel the ru-mors about the official conclusion that the assassination was the work of Lee Harvey Oswald, acting

The Connailys confined themselves to what they eard and saw. She remembered three shots. Wounded by one of them, the former governor beard only two. Both agreed they all came from above and behind them, from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository where Oswald had worked.

"We may be wrong" about the precise sequence or timing of the shots. Mr. Connally said at one point, but be rejected suggestions that his or Mrs. Connally's memories might have dimmed with the years.

"The things we do remember today," he said solemply. "are as indelibly eached in our minds as anything ever could be."

The crucial questioning concerned the number of shots that were fired and where they landed. The Warren Commission concluded that there were three, one of which missed the presidential limousine, one of which wounded both Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Connally, and one which finally killed the president.

Despite that conclusion. Nellie Connally and, until yesterday ber husband, had always insisted without reservation that Mr. Connally and Mr. Kennedy were wounded by separate bullets, before the fatal shot was fired. Indirectly at least, that version conflicts with the Warren Commission's findings because it fails to ex-plain the bullet that missed, the one that bit a curbstone several hundred feet in front of the presidential car and kicked up a concrete fragment, nicking a bystander in the cheek. The Warren Commission con-eluded that Oswald could have fired three shots but no more. A fourth shot would suggest the presence of a second gunman.

Undeterred by such arithmetic, Mr. Connally told Life magazine in 1966 that he was positive that he and the president were hit by separate shots.

Yesterday, however, Mr. Connally made a major concession, declaring now that it "might well be" that the single-bullet theory was correct after all and that he and Mr. Kennedy were wounded by the same shot. passing through both the president and Mr. Connally

Mrs. Connally had no such reservations. The first sbot, she said, hit Mr. Kennedy, a second bullet hit her husband, and the third killed the president.

"I heard a noise that I didn't think of as a gnosbot," she told the committee under questioning by Gary Cornwell, the deputy chief counsel. Sitting in a jumpseat next to her husbaod and in front of the Ken-nedys, Mrs. Connally "looked in back and saw the president clutch his hands to his neck," she explained.

'He said nothing. He just slumped down in the seat."

"John had turned to his right and shouled, 'no, no, no, "Nellie Connally said. Then, "the second shot was fired and hit him. He [Mr. Connally] was in the process of turning [back around again, this time to his left]. His hand was on his knee. The bullet went through him."

'Never Looked Back'

Mrs. Connally said she thought her husband was dead but instinctively pulled him down into her lap. "The only thing I could think of was to pull him down, so maybe they wouldn't hurt him anymore." she testified, as her husband listened, brushing tears from his eyes with a handkerchief. "I never looked back [at the Kennedys] after John was hit."

"It had a very pronounced impact." Mr. Conually said, slamming his hands together with a loud thwack. 'I could see blood and brain tissue all over the car. We were covered. There were little pieces of brain tissue as big as your little finger."

At that, Nellie Connally remembered, Jacqueline Kennedy eried out, "They've killed my husband. I have his brains in my hand." Mr. Connally said he is convinced that the first shot he heard did not hit him, but he does not know whether it hit the president either, as his wife said it

"I heard what I thought was a rifle shot," he said of the first report. "I turned to the right to see if I could eatch the president out of the right corner of my eye. I frankly had a fear of assassination."

Senate Votes '79 Budget, Smaller Than Requested

By James L. Rowe Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (WP)

— The Senate last night passed a binding 1979 budget that is about $6-billion smaller than President Carter's revised, midyear budget request and about the same size as the one approved by the House last month. The vote was 56 to 18.

The Senate defeated several attempts to cut spending even more.
The Senate version, which must go to a conference with the House, is $9.3-billion smaller than the tentato last spring.

The Senate budget is $489.5 billion for fiscal 1979, while the Lance Probers House version is $489.8 billion.

Both the House and Senate budgets more than fulfill the Carter administration's request that Congress cut federal spending in 1979 to about $491 billion. Mr. Carter made the request, in the interests of fighting inflation a few days after he announced a revised 1979 budget of $496.6 billion.

Borrows From Public

When the federal government runs a deficit it borrows from the public, in competition with private borrowers. That has the tendency to boost interest rates, especially in times such as now when demand for credit is heavy.

The resolution also leaves room for a tax cut of $15.2 billion in fiscal 1979, which starts Oct. 1, and a continuation of $8.2 billion of tax credits that were enacted into law in 1975.

The House version leaves room for about $16.2 billion of tax cuts - the amount specified in the tax bill passed last month by the House. The Senate Finance Committee began work on its version of in Plains," the newspaper said. "In a tax cut bill today.

Obituaries

Born in Brest Litovsk, Russia, he immigrated with his family to New York in 1910. He grew up on the lower East Side, where his father sold cheap clothing from a stand in Grand Street. He graduated from DeWitt Clinton High School, worked and for a time lived at the Henry Street Settlement, spent a year at Columbia College on a scholarship, peddled goods in the Middle West and worked briefly as a reporter on The Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal.

After returning to New York in 1921, Mr. Somenberg got a job at the Joint Distribution Committee, which led to an assignment with an American relief mission in Turkey and the Ukraine. Paradoxically, the contrast of his own relatively affluent situation there with the mass poverty around him appears to have determined his course from

He came home in 1923 with little money but an elegant Continental wardrobe. He dabhled in writing and in acting, then drifted into Ireelance press agentry for nightclubs and theaters. In 1924, he married a Henry Street Settlement worker, Hilda Caplan. Their honeymoon, he said, was a 50-cent Chinese lunch, after which both returned to work.

Mr. Sounenberg entered the big time with an engagement to publi-cize the new Fifth Avenue Hotel in 1926. He and his clients, who soon included other major botels, found that the key to prominent play in the press was to promote the presence of newsworthy guests, paying or otherwise.

A great early coup was his mounting of a sort of parade up Broadway for Trader Horn, an Af-rican peddler whose ghostwritten memoirs became a best seller.

Ely Culbertson was another early client. Mr. Sonnenberg asserted that he had "sold" contract bridge as newsworthy to an editor of The New York Times, who first objected that "we play poker here" but who finally arranged for a tele-graph line to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to report on a Culbertson

BERLIN, Sept. 7 (NYT) — For three days recently, Abdul Latif Malik, an illegal immigrant from Pakistan, sat without food in a West Berlin refugee bome, almost or elevated railway, just getting off at one of the 200 or more stops in the Western half of the city.

To dissuade the immigration, authorities have begun to look sharply into the operations of what they say is an illicit network of helpmates, including German lawyers and Pakistani travel agents, who are out to make money from the misery of the poor.

One lawyer, who asked not to be identified, said that he made out 20 or more asylum applications for immigrants daily and earned about $50 from each of the foreigners. "If a man tells me his is a pobtical ref-ugee, I don't ask questions," he said. Anthorities have started proceedings against him and nine other West Berlin lawyers reported to have handled the bulk of the Pakistani cases. Under West German law, foreigners seeking permanent resi-dence in West Berlin or West Germany must prove that they are victims of political prosecution at home and must formally apply for asylum. Accordingly, the new-comers, most of them illiterate and few with any knowledge of a Western language, are rushed by travel operators immediately upon arrival to a lawyer's office where the necessary papers are made out.

Outlawed Party

In the case of the Pakistanis the applications generally say that the immigrants were members of the Pakistani People's Party, a group officially outlawed. With that paper in hand, the immigrants register with the police authorities to ask for asylum and qualify for support and shelter while their cases are being studied, a process that can take years. (Since early this week, officials have ruled that simple membership in the Pakistani party or any other political group does not qualify foreigners for asylum.)

Once they are accepted as seeking asylum, the newcomers are given free shelter and receive a daily $3.50 meal payment. For some of the impoverished men, even that small sum seems a lot.

The big threshers are working into the night near Moscow. People like Dmitri Agaltsev, a combine operator who personally barvested nearly 1,900 tons of corn in one 17hour day, are being cited as this fall's heroes.

Western agricultural experts agree that the Kremlin has good reason to be pleased with the harvest. It is likely to meet the target of 220 million tons of grain for the year and might even break the 1976 record of nearly 224 million tons.

And yet, while it might seem like smooth sailing. Soviet agriculture has actually been knocked sharply Kremlinologists are still constable. Kremlinologists are still scrateb-ing their heads over the polocal implications of the situation. "Agriculture is much more important to the Soviet leadership picture than most of us give it credit for," one commented. They agree that there seem to be serious differences at the top over the proper future course of agricultural policy, and that these differences are being forced into the foreground by widespread public dissatisfaction with the continuing inability of Soviet agriculture to provide enough of the kinds of food it wants. "It's necessary for the party to ry to show they're doing whatever is possible to improve the situation," a Western expert said. The plenum, convened in early June while Western attention was focused on major dissident trials bere, was the Kremlin's attempt to do just that.

War by Other Means

When Clausewitz described war as the pursuit of policy goals "by other means," be gave a substantial warning to diplomats. What they do over the green table could be extended into the green fields; the words they drop to one another could be imitated by men, women and children, falling dead before shot and shell. But there is another aspect of the Clausewitz doctrine that is worth bearing in mind, especially at a time when peace is the watchword and very few are willing to talk of war.

Whether at Camp David or in Arab capitals, whether in Moscow or Washington, the main goal may well he peace. But there are other objectives for which the protagonists are willing to risk war. They are pursuing objectives by peaceful techniques - but they are still pursuing those objectives. And this, to play on Clausewitz's words, might well be called war by other means.

Israel bopes to hold some territory that the Egyptians want — and there are other Arahs who want even more and who are unhappy to see President Sadat in the Maryland hills. Moscow and Washington are quarreling, in subdued voices, about Soviet and American citizens arrested in the Soviet Union and the United States. China and Vietnam are arguing, more loudly, about borders and the treatment of the Chinese in Vietnam, about the relations between Cambodia and Vietnam (into which North Korea seems to be projecting itself on Cambodia's side), about the position of the Soviet Union in Asia. Lebanon is still torn by a complex of issues hased on the original Christian-Moslem division; sub-Saharan Africa by internal politics and the position of whites in countries where this problem has not yet been resolved. Guatemala is revealing in strikes and acts of violence the limits of political discussion under the Somoza family, Religious disputes in Iran have become highly political.

All of these tangled situations comprise goals that could be worked out, presumably, by rational human heings seeking just and equitable answers to their problems. But when goals become fixed in buman minds, negotiation hecomes tough-minded. Parties seek allies who can apply pressures on their opponents. Tactics of discussion involve flank attacks, central assaults, last stands. War is not only just around the corner from any major negotiation between states or groups that confront one another - it actually enters into the process, in terminology, psychology and frequently in actual, if limited, uses of violence.

This is what none of the parties concerned with the world's present tensions can afford to forget — their approach to the situation may transcend its inherent dangers, or summon up those perils on every occasion. Negotiation that too closely resembles war can leave the bitterness of war in its wake and threaten the stability of any agreement.

And, of course, such tactics around the hargaining table can produce exactly what the negotiations were supposed to avert: war.

During the latter part of the 19th century in Europe there were many meetings of the continental powers, about the Balkans, about the colonies. The voices were diplomatic, but stern; sometimes a Kaiser might write a letter that was stern but undiplomatic. And the principal states sought allies — the Triple Alliance, the Triple Entente — which might, on the surface, only involve the exchange of glossily uniformed marshals and generals. But when the chips were down, when an apparently irrelevant murder by a group of terrorists started Austria-Hungary demanding more than it would have done in a normal diplomatic gathering, the alliances suddenly became real armies, crossing real frontiers, and inflicting death and destruction upon the

'We're Getting Into Autumn — How

WASHINGTON — With the world's eyes fixed on the Catoctin Mountain summit, questions go unasked about three of the biggest stories of the year:

The escalation of the Co

nist drive to take over Africa. A possibility exists that a sur-face-to-air missile brought down a Rhodesian airliner. If that is true, who armed the terrorists headed by Joshua Nkomo with missiles?

When the Russians tried to arm Cuba with missiles capable of hit-ting the United States, the U.S. government readily went to the brink of war. If it should turn out that the Russians are supplying missiles to terrorists in Africa (and that is not yet proven), should we not at least stop trying to under-mine the "internal settlement?" What would we do if Palestinian terrorists were supplied with mis-siles? Or Puerto Rican nationalists?

• The biggest money-stealing scandal in the history of the American government.

On July 26, after being shown evidence of widespread corruption, Jimmy Carter authorized the Justice Department to enter the investigation of the General Services Administration. On July 27, he au-thorized the firing of Robert T. Griffin, a Tip O'Neill crony who bad been with the agency for 35 years and had been its acting head during the 76-77 interregoum.

At the time, we were told that the Griffin dismissal was just a matter of bureaucratie incompatibility: Tip's man just couldn't get along with the new agency chief. But why should the president risk a major hlowup with his much-needed House speaker over a simple pa-tronage matter?

Real Reason?

What was the real reason for forcing Trp's man out? We have been assured that Mr. Griffin is a man of "high moral character and persocal integrity;" if so, why was he oot left in place to help ferret out the grafters in the agency he knew better than anybody? If, on the other hand, Mr. Griffin was seen to be personally honest hut likely to protect his old pals, or to drag a foot if the investigation reached congressmen who may have cut a few deals, then why was Tip's crooy giveo a $50,000 sine-cure in the Carter White House? That's quite a place to put somebody you do oot trust.

A profoundly experienced intelli-geore operative tells me that this may be the most dangerous penetration of our intelligence since the Soviets put a man in the National Security Agency in the late '50s." This concern goes deeper than the loss of one great secret and be-yond the need to tighten security procedures. It rejects the notion that any young man can get himself hired by the CIA, be given immedi-ate access to the most intimate secrets of a nation's arsenal, and be able to walk out one sunny day with the single secret that the Russians want most.

The concern of intelligence professionals is that this episode may indicate the presence of a Soviet "agent in place" high up in the CIA. The possibility of an Ameri-can Philby always draws great chuckles from U.S. leaders; but put oo the eyeglasses of the legendary Edward Jay Epstein or oovelist Graham Greene and ask along with

The CIA might try to brusb off these questions as fanciful, contending instead that the recent theft was the work of one man trying to make some money — but more than one senator of the Select Intelligence Committee is working on the assumption that our mtelli-gence agency has been infiltrated. Does Tail Wag Dog On Human Rights?

WASHINGTON — A thrice-repeated but unsubstantiated trend toward buman rights. indictment of Argentina by Assistant Secretary of State Patricia Derian testifying publicly before Congress reveals the shattering impact on U.S. foreign policy of human rights crusading.

Under questioning Aug. 9 by the House inter-American affairs subcommittee, burnan rights chief Derian responded with language seldom used by one friendly power to another, accusing the Argentine regime of killings, kidnappings and torture. So harsh was her language that the State Department and to that the State Department tried to expunge it from the record. But apart from being undiplomatic, there is considerable doubt of accu-

The impact could prove tragic for U.S.-Argentine relations and perhaps for Argentina itself. Mod-erate and pro-U.S. elements within the Argentine junta have been weakened; deterioration of the U.S. position in the strategie southern corner of South America has been

Prediction

This cannot be dismissed as merely unfortunate ardor by an idealist unfamiliar with diplomacy. Deterioration of U.S. relations with Brazil, Chile and now Argentina too elosely follows the scenario of Latin American specialists in the Carter administration who privately predicted that the human rights crusade would foster the left in the Western hemisphere.

Concern that the buman rights tail is wagging the foreign policy dog is spreading in both the admin-istration and Congress. On Capitol Hill, growing attention is paid to the imminent loss of up to $1.4 billioo in sales to Argentina — includ-ing $620 million in Export-Import Bank transactions.

So, when Miss Derian testified on Aug. 9, she was asked by sub-committee ehairman Gus Yatron of Pennsylvania why her human rights office recommended against the Export-Import Bank loans. Even Miss Derian's own aides were taken aback by her answer:

"The reason for our advice was the continuing violation of basic human rights by Argentina. The systematic use of torture, summary execution of political dissidents, the disappearance and the impris onment of thousands of individuals without charge, including mothers, eburchmen, nuns, labor leaders, journalists, professors and members of human rights organiza-

ravages, was Miss Derian telling the truth? Her office insists that the Argentine junta has "executed" 3,000 persons since seizing power in 1976 and that additionally at least 5,000 persons are missing. But these figures come from private sources of dubious reliability. U.S. government bureaus with vastly more experience than Miss Derian's say the figures cannot be verified and seem inflated.

Actually, the junta, in confronting a bloody rebellion by the far left in 1976, used an iron fist to prevent a Communist takeover. But many killings and kidnappings are traceable to rightist paramilitary groups not under government control and should not be counted as government "executions." Moreover, objective observers agree that Argentina's buman rights record has improved markedly the past

Nuances Disregarded

Those nuances are disregarded by Miss Derian's office. While un-able to draw distinctions between moderates and extremists inside the junta, the buman rights crusaders say that military rule in Argentina cannot last much longer and that the United States should disengage from backing the junta, Such a prospect is rejected by Latin American experts, whatever their ideolo-

But behind the naivete, a pattern emerges. A prediction was made before Mr. Carter took office by Brady Tyson, now with the U.S. mission to the Umited Nations, that buman rights would be used to sup-port revolutionary forces in the hemisphere. The generic Soviet joke, which probably was invented a week after Lenin took power, is: "What is the difference between capitalism and socialism?" To which the answer is "capitalism is the exploitation of man by man, and socialism is the opposite." Prof. Stephen Cohen gave as the next most standard oke, "Is it possible to huild socialism in ooe country, say, Holland?"
"Of course, but what have you got against Holland?" On my first trip to the Soviet Unioo I was most solemnly warned at a State Department briefing that jokes at the expense of Lenin were not under any circumstances to be attempted: that in Soviet circles such jokes would be the equivalent of jokes ahour God at a Baptist coovention. That year was more-over the 100th anniversary of the birth of Lenin, and the celebration of that monster's brief but decisive leverage on world history was at the saturation level — after reaching the figure 100, I gave up countof Lenin at a single large newsstand in Moscow. In Poland there was a book of pictures - I do not exaggerate — of the home of the dentist in Wroclaw who had once treated Lenin's teeth. Even so I heard. . . "Question (schoolmaster to student): 'What was the most important historical development in 1875?' Answer: 'Lenin was five years old."

Where's Lenin?

The Kennan people even dug np a joke that combined Lenin and sex, and that takes a lot of ingenuily, and a little pattence. Here it is, as recited by Sovietologist Ahraham Brumberg: "As its cootribu-tion to the 100th anniversary of Lenio's birth, the Polish govern-

William Chapman's article oo "Blue-Eyed Dolls Coming Out of the Closer" (1HT, Aug. 24) interested me particularly, as I was a very small girl in Tokyo in 1927 and received one of those dolls from my little Japanese neighbors.

They sang a song, which must have become popular because of the gif1 of these dolls from America, which ran, "Aoi me o shita, o ningyo san, naka-yoku asonde, etc. the meaning of which was, "Blue-eyed doll, let's play happily together" — I can still sing it, if

They also called me "Ma-ari Pickufodo" in the street, as they only knew Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplio as foreign stars, and I really didn't look much like Charlie.

Thanks for reviving my long-lost childhood. It's a lot more pleasant than the mess we have to face

Retirement Ruling

I am an American-born citizeo who has worked as an executive for a U.S. multinational company in Europe for the past 15 years. This year I will reach the mandatory retirement age of 65 and have applied for Social Security benefits to which I am entitled.

I was sent a booklet by the Social Security Administration which stated that I could receive these benefits so long as I did not perform any type of work so loog as I continued to teside abroad. However.if I return to the U.S. I can work and earn up to $4,000 per year without loss of benefits. As we desire to remain abroad uotil our children's educatioo is completed in another two years, this ruling condemns me to sit at home and not even accept an occa-sional consulting job without losing my becefits eveo though the pay would be far less than my colleagues who elected to return to the United States.

Deauville Festival-

A Cinematic Grab Bag With a Solemn Touch

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

under the supervision of its cofounders, Andre Hamili and Lionel

Its present session is graced by two legendary guests from Holly-wood: Gloria Swanson and director King Vidor. Both these eminent screen figures made their debuts in the movies over 50 years ago, a fact their appearances belie, and both are still active in the art. Miss Swanson, who has been acting on Broadway and on televisioo lately, is to star in a new film this winter and Vidor, having completed a book on film direction, is preparing another script. On Monday evening Mrs. d'Ornano bestowed the meda of Deauville upon them and similarly honored two other American cinema guests, Kirk Douglas and Norman Jewison.

The 1978 Deanville program, like that of all such festivals, is a grab bag. It opened with an inaugural hall in the casino's Hall of Mirrors, a full-dress soiree, but its initial films were of a solemn nature.

The first was "The Last Campaign," a documentary of the last days of Sen. Robert Kennedy. Edited by Barbara Frank, it is cut from footage covering the final stages of his tour to gain the Demo-cratic presidential nomination in 1968. Its showing was prefaced by an address by U.S. Ambassador to France Arthur Hartman, and Pierre Salinger, who is seen in some of its scenes, delivered a hrief introduction. Minus the customary trappmgs, such as the "voice over" and flash-forwards, it presents vividly a page from history in screen form.

It relates the career of a film week at Deauville, oow in American labor movement from its union organizer who, to protect his followers against attacks by company goons, resorts to gangland pro-tection. Later, when he is enthroned in high estate, this old deht must be paid. He finds himself in a Corneillian situation, with expediency at war with conscience forcing a decision upon him.

In execution, the earlier sections of "F.LS.T." are the most graphic and persuasive: the brutal battles of underpaid workers opposed by the strong-arm methods of their employers in the 1930s. The scenario would disclose the corruption that power breeds, and in the sec-ond half one finds the rugged, bold union chiefs grown sleek and swinish, their victory won. Sylvester Stallone, star-au-thor of "Rocky," has written the screenplay, with Joe Eszterhas, and is effective as the brave labor organizer of the beginning and acceptable as the ex-manual laborer become union boss, while Jewison's staging of the opening sequences lends them a fine theatrical force.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (IHT) - If you are an insomniae or a somnoleot individual, don't fight the habit, urges Dr. Wilse Webh, a University of Florida sleep researcher. Dr. Webb says that the reason some people oeed 12 hours of sleep while others oced only 5 is due to the fact that sleep patterns

Dr. Webb has been conducting sleep experiments for 18 years in an attempt to determine how much sleep an individual needs and the effects of disrupted slumber.

Recent results of his experiments and research show that sleep is average amount of sleep is seven determined by a natural biological and a half hours. About 15 percent rhythm which is inherited from sleep less than six and a half hours one's ancestors. Since this built-in and another 15 percent sleep for natural sleep system is difficult to change, Dr. Wehh explains, "an individual really shouldn't fight the urge to sleep longer. We can't will ourselves to sleep less, for example, any more than we can will ourselves to grow a third leg."

Even though sleep patterns tend to remain constant from generation to generation. Dr. Wehb reports that Americans today, on the average, sleep one and a half hours less daily than they did 60 years ago.

For most adults nowadays, the

The Garlic Cure for Cholesterol BONN, Sept. 7 (UPI) - West their cholesterol level dropped

German researchers have a new solution to the problem of cholesterol-clogged blood vessels — garlic.

Old wives have for centuries claimed that garlie cures many ills. from snake bites to toothache. Now, according to Prof. Hans Reuter of Cologne, there is proof that garlic helps clear the fat accu-mulating in the blood vessels of those who love to eat rich food, thereby reducing the danger of Tests showed that volunteers fed butter containing 50 grams of garlie oil in gelatine capsules had a cho-lesterol level considerably lower than that of a control group fed butter without garlic. In another experiment, patients are 3 grams of raw garlie daily. After four weeks markedly. According to Prof. Reuter, garlic not only drives out the unwanted fats in the blood, but also kills bacteria such as those causing diptheria and tuberculosis. He said garlic was in some cases more effective than penicillin and other conventional antibiotics.

And, apart from the smell, garlic has no undesirable side effects, he elderly are tied to patterns of ex-

"If everybody were to eat garlic regularly, as in many southern countries," Prof. Reuter said, "the smell would bother no one.

To get the full benefit of this herbal cure, he said, fresh garlic must be used. Garlic powder will not work any medicinal miraeles, since the plant loses its healing properties when processed.

Sleep Patterns Are Called Hereditary

more than eight and a half hours.

Although Americans are "squeezing sleep" and trying to break hereditary habits, Dr. Wehh notes that at least we haven't reached the level of the elephant or short-tailed shrew, which get by on only two hours of sleep. Gorillas and cats, on the other hand, sleep about 14 out of every 24 hours. Dr. Webb says different patterns of sleep are caused by "an evolutionary, adaptive relationship between the organism and its environment, i.e., people and certain animals sleep when and as long as they do because at some point in their development that schedule meant the difference between life and death." If an individual can get by ou five hours of sleep, Dr. Webh reasons that it probably means his ancestors were forced to get by oo that amount.

The change in the sleep average indicates not so much a change of habits by ancestors but a change in modern society. Dr. Wehh de-scribes this change as the "Edison effect," whereby "the electric light, while ripping away our cocooo of darkness, has expanded our activities by turning night into day and nibbling away at our slumber

Minimal Change

However, over the past 100 years, the change has been minimal and most Americans still tend to need between six and a half and eight and a half hours of sleep,

In addition to the younger individual's sleeping patterns, Dr. Webb has also been studying the sleeping habits of those over 50. Voluoteers for this research were isolated for 16 days while researchers measured and monitored their responses to changes in their sleep schedules. Some preliminary find ings show that the elderly have a more fragile sleep system that is less capable of coping with changes. Dr. Wehh also discovered that heart disease, strokes, cancer and suicide increases among the tremely long or short nightly sleep.

Other cooditions that adversely affect the older individual's sleer are the influence of drugs, which "unquestionably depress respiration. and frequent arousals from and disruptions of sleep, which also affect breathing. Dr. Webh's research is sponsored hy the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Movies in Cuba

High Priority for Revolutionary Society

By Margor Kernan

WASHINGTON (WPI - A delegation of American film critics who visited Cuha this summer discovered a third-world revolutionary society in which movies have a surprisingly high priority.

In fact, the first cultural act of the revolutionary government in 1959 was to establish the Cuban Institute of the Cinematographic Arts and Industries (ICAIC), headed by Alfredo Guevara. Before the revolutioo, there was only a token industry, mostly devoted to pornography.
Twenty years later, Cuba produces about 130 films a year - features, documentaries, oewsreels and cartoons — the work of 10 feature-film directors and about 20 documentary directors. In addition, ICAIC is responsible for more than 100 cine-movile units, which use trucks, and sometimes even boats and mules, to bring movies to the people in remote areas.

To the early days of the Soviet Union, Lenin also stressed the importance of film, especially newsreels, when he told the commissar of education that "for us, cinema is the most important of all the arts." And like the first revolutionary works of Sergei Eisenstein and Dzi-ga Vertov. Cuban movies are rich in technical finesse, inventive, con-crete, and nothing like the Holly-wood product they do, in fact, of-

Examples include Corta-zar's "The Teacher." a prize wioocr The portrait of Hoover, though lurid and unflattering is hazy and enigmatic. The American delegation viewed 22 films at the Cuban Film Institute and were struck by the absence of movie stereotypes. The trappings of consumerism - fast cars, lush starlets, stories of sex and crime are deliberately excluded as a harmful legacy of capitalism, kind of "cultural colonialism." Moreover, there are no stars in Cuban films, just ordinary people with whom audiences can identify. As one director pointed out, "When people are made to want to be pretty, ugly people feel bad." Nonetheless, Hollywood movies remain very popular in Cuba, in spite of the U.S. blockade that forhids trade between the two countries. Jorge Fraga, director of the documentary, "The New School," said that if Brezhnev and Carter were both to speak in Havana on the same day, everyone would go hear Brezhnev: but if the choice were between a Russian and an American movie, everyone would choose the American one.

A popular weekly television show, "24 Times a Secood," takes films apart to show, as Guevara has said, "all the tricks that the cinema uses, especially the commercial cinema, to strike at the sensitivity of the spectator." For instance, when "Jaws" opened in Havana, the program devoted three sessions to it. One showed how the mechanical shark worked, one gave an interview with a marioe hiologist who explained real shark behavior and one presented videotaped interviews with members of the "Jaws" ma, the dialy oewspaper of the Cuban Communist Party, and during the week that the delegation was there Roman Polanski's "China-town," Alfred Hitchcock's "Vertigo," John Ford's "The Sun Shines Bright" and Tomas Gutierrez Alea's Chicago Festival prize-winner. The Last Supper," were among the films on exhibition, along with "Jaws" and "The Godfather." Not all Hollywood movies reached Cuba illegally. Francis Ford Coppola brought in his own print of "Godfather II" (commended by one Cuban director for its careful reconstruction of the revo-lution), and some U.S. films are bought from European distributors at inflated prices.

The Analyses

When "The Godfather" ["El Padrino") appeared, it too was analyzed on television and exhibited at 12 theaters at once so that there would not be long lines advertising the film. Before it opened, there was also a detailed article in Granma giving historical background about the Mafia (without mentioning the filmt.

If all this makes going to the movies in Cuba sound like going to school, that's partly true. Cuban directors feel that movies are one of the most effective ways of reaching and educating people. But they work to find engaging ways of presenting information, and the old cliches of socialist realism have been tossed out the window.

If you already drive a 6 cylinder or you'd like to have one, it is more than likely that you set great store on the comfort of your car. BMW are offering you just this in an increased range of models. The BMW 520, with its new 6 cylinder engine, proves just how fascinating and advanced, technology can be in the 2 litre class.

Even with 6 cylinder engines there is still that subtle difference between quantity and quality. You can, of course, buy 6 cylinder models in the better versions of standard cars, but if you are the kind of person who is more concerned with the type of cylinder rather than the number, we recommend a test drive in one of our 520's.

All the advantages of a top class car teamed with the economy of 2 litres. The BMW 6 cylinder combines the extraordinary reliability, stability and long life of the large 6 cylinder with, performance, elasticity and economy. One important point to note is that, compared to the 4 cylinder models the present BMW 2 litre fuel consumption is, on average, less. We have also designed the 6 cylinder for more prolonged usage - it has been specially constructed to minimise wear. This, of course, means that it will be in a better condition and worth more when you want to sell it.

6 cylinder engines with lower capacity: Only the best is good enough. Not every engine with more than 4 cylinders can attain the same high standard of comfort and vibration free ride as the BMW 6 cylinder. For in the 6 cylinder engine that BMW use, the inertia forces and moments of the first and second order are completely balanced this enhances the smooth running of the car. Neither the V6 engines nor the 5 cylinder engines have this advantage.

BMW are only satisfied with the very best they can get.

Italy Reaffirms Its Intentions To Join EMS

ROME, Sept. 7 (AP-DI) — Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti reaffirmed his country's intentions to join the pro-posed European Monetary Sys-tem in talks today with Com-mon Market president Roy

At the same time, Mr. Andreotti emphasized that the EMS cannot be allowed to exacerbate the economic weaknesses of "less-favored countries" such as Italy.

A pegging of the lira to other European currencies within the EMS could hurt the competitivi-ty of Italian exports because the Italian currency would not be able to decline in value rapidly enough to compensate for the nation's comparatively high inflation rate.

Agriculture's share of total exports may have declined slightly,

Hsinhua said China signed more trade agreements and contracts with foreign concerns in the first with foreign concerns in the first half than in the corresponding 1977 period, noting that China signed a long-term trade agreement with Japan and another with the European Community.

U.S. Reduces Dollar Purchases

By Colleen Sullivan

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (NYT) -The amount of Federal Reserve and Treasury intervention in the foreign exchange market in New York decreased to $332.5 million in the quarter ended July 31 from the Sl.26 billion that mooetary authorities used on behalf of the dollar in the preceding quarter, the Fed

The intervention involved the sale of the equivalent of $300.3 mil-lion in Deutsche marks and $32 million in Swiss francs.

Fed officials, terming the U.S. dollar "seriously undervalued" and its current level on world money markets "ridiculously low," said yesterday that the Fed would have to ecoulnue to intervene in foreignexchange markets on behalf of the dollar until the Carter administranon took stronger measures to re-solve the nation's underlying ecooomie problems. The two ranking foreign-ex-ehange officials of the Federal Re-serve Bank of New York, which conducts the central bank's currency operations, said the dollar would not return to acceptable levels until a federal energy program was adopted — if not by Congress, then by executive fiat — and until the country's massive trade deficit was reduced.

Alan Holmes, executive vice president and manager of the Fed's open-market account, and Scott Pardee, vice president and deputy manager of foreign operations, made the comments at the bank's quarterly oews conference yester-day on foreign-exchange opera-

As the dollar stabilized on world money markets, compared with its performance in the February-April quarter, the Fed and Treasury Department also repaid $1.77 billion of "swap" debt ontstanding with the West German central bank and $69 million of swap debt outstanding with the Swiss National Bank, the Fed said.

The swap network operated by the world's central banks and the Bank for International Settlements consists of a $22.2-billion series of short-term, reciprocal credit lines to finance foreign-exchange intervenzion.

The balance of the swap debt outstanding with the Bundesbank at the end of July was $847.5 mil-lion — $650.5 million owed by the Fed and $197 million by Treasury. While the $69-million Swiss swap that incurred during the February. debt incurred during the February-April quarter was repaid entirely in May and June, the Fed drew another $22.9 million from that credit line during the May-July period to finance part of its market intervention, the bank said. All of the $22.9 million was outstanding at the end of the quarter. Neither the Fed nor the Treasury drew upon their swap lines with the Bundesbank during the last quarter.

Neither he nor Mr. Pardee would discuss the sharp currency fluctuations in the past five weeks that have pushed the dollar to new lows against the Japanese yen and Deutsche mark. They also declined to define an "emergency" market situation or to discuss whether the government had used the swap credit since the end of the last reporting period on July 31. ### U.S., Japan Fail In Trade Talks

WASHINGTON, Sept.7 (WP) — U.S.-Japanese trade talks ended today with no resolution reported on the issue of reduced tariffs on a wide range of agricultural products.
U.S. officials yesterday called the discussions "disappointing."
Follow-up meetings are slated to be held either here or in Japan on the touchiest questions of quotas on Japanese imports of U.S. beef and citrus products. Further talks on other agricultural items are ex-pected to take place in Geneva.

The discussions on agricultural products are being conducted by the Office of Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss, with a Japanese delegation led by Japanese Special trade envoy Nobuhiko Ushiba and Japanese Agriculture Minister Ichiro Nakagawa

The two sides discussed U.S. demands for lower tariffs on pork. chicken, poultry, wine, raisins, olives, and other products. Late yesterday afternooo and evening discussions turned to beef and orange quotas, which now are respectively, 90,000 tons and 45,000 tons annually. The U.S. poalion is that the quotas should be abandoned entirely, but U.S. officials do not expect that to happen. A lesser goal set by Mr. Strauss is a doubling of the quotas, but the Japanese delegation is strongly resist-

But participants at the Eu-rofer board meeting said the matter was not brought up. These sources said general sentiment among a majority of steel makers in the community, especially in West Germany, France, Italy and the Benelux, is against such voluntary export limitations to the United States.

One of the arguments used to reject the idea of export limitations is that such curbs could provoke antitrust action by the U.S. steel trade and processing industry.
Officials at the EEC Commission also conceded that steel expects have risen in general in 1978 1977 judging by earlier trend its cators. But according to latest available official statistics, steel exports rose 30 percent to about 7.62 million metric tons in the first four months of 1978 from 5.86 million tons in the year-earlier period while exports to the United States alone more than doubled to 1.79 million tons from 835,000 tons

LOST TRIBES AND PROMISED LANDS

The Origins of American Racism

By Ronald Sanders. Little Brown. 443 pp. $15. Reviewed by Bernard Weisberger

TN HIS PREFACE to this hook. lish planters, in a European trans-Ronald Sanders describes it as a multiple ethnic history of the interrelationships among hlacks, Iodians, Jews and "white Christian dominators" in the New World, which draws on a "perhaps star-tling variety of subject matters." The variety is such, in fact, that he sometimes seems to be merely spinning out a series of fascinating hut unrelated tales. He promises, however, that the "various strands keep coming together in the end." They do not quite do that, and what emerges is therefore a sometimes puzright is the table a somethiat pur-zing design — but one that is, all the same unfailingly interesting and profoundly important. It extends into new areas the crucial dissections of American racial stereotypes undertaken in receot years by writers like Winthrop Jordan, Da-vid Brion Davis, George Fredrick-soo and Robert Berkholer.

It is essential to try, at least, to summarize Sanders' wide-ranging story. For almost a century before 1492, he believes, the European im-agination painted a favorable picture of lands beyond the horizoo. In those unknown realms were mythical kiogdoms, iooocent "savages," lost Edens, fabled treasuries — a rich black Christian king (Prester John) in Africa; a Jewish natioo descended from Israel's ten lost tribes somewhere in Asia; and Fortunate Islands in the Atlantic, whose inhabitants lived in ntopian social harmony or in a reworking of antiquity's old age (both Renais-

All these legends fed the curiosity which underlay the great age of exploration. They also set up as-sumptions that the people to be met with in the newly discovered lands would be treated as human heings in familiar social roles and configurations regardless of color. That was wby so many early dis-coverers looked at the red and hlack tribesmen, and thought they saw beneath the paint and hangles counterparts to their own princes, oobles, councilors, priests, traders, peasants and workers. But other, countervailing forces were at work, growing stronger as the 16th century unfolded. In Spain, only recently recaptured for Christianity, the work of uprooting the tolerant, eight-ceotury-old Moorish culture led to a zeal for doctrinal and "hlood" purity that became translated into forced consistent and expulsion of Jens and version and expulsion of Jews and Moslems, and far less sympathy for newly found dark-skinned infidels. Portuguese explorers opened the African coast, and in the expansive mood of early commercial capital-ism, found nothing wrong in bartering with the Arah traders and bartering with the Alah traders and tribal rulers of "Guinea" for car-goes of slaves. They then sold these possible kinsmen of Prester John to Dutch, French, Spanish and Eng-action unmarked by qualms. In all of Western Europe both Reformation and Counter-Reformation sharpened religious enthusiasm for heresy-hunting at home and for killing dispossessing and converting heathers abroad Eventhe romantic individualism of a waning chivalric order encouraged some young Hispanic gentlemen-soldiers to dream of subduing faraway empires and redeeming whole peoples for God. The conquista-dores were the last exemplars of the illusions that Cervantes would

And so, by around 1650, it was done. The Indians became back-ward, impoverished wards for the Spanish friars, and perfidious Canaanites for Puritan English-men. The Africans became benight ed subhumans - slaves not by misfortune, as was the case in ancient times, hut through oatural inferiori-ty. Some European humanists might criticize the prevailing drift, but the debate was nonetheless carried on in terms imposed by Euro-pean mastery. Noble or skulking cannibalistic or childlike, the red man and the black man were imag-es conceived by and for whites. The best example is the term "Indian" itself — Columbus error in think-ing he had bit the Indies was remaing he had hit the Indies was perpe tuated for all native Americans.

Such, brutally compressed,

Sanders' argumeot, drawn from an sanders argument, drawn from an intensive examination of maps, atlases, plays, oovellas, travel books and religious tracts, all embodying various cultural visions. I must admit to ignorance of many of them, and take it on faith that they say what Sanders asserts. Given that assumption, the book is engaging, stimulating and original.

Some of it, however, seems a bit strained. Sanders has written considerahly on Jewish history, and he believes that the Jewish search for asylum was an important compoasylum was an important component in the urge to explore. He cites a long list of forcibly converted Jews (and some who were out Christianized), who played important roles in mapping and publicizing the New World, and financing expeditions. He plays with the longstanding speculation that Columbus himself was of converse descept. In my eyes, at least, he desceot. In my eyes, at least, he huilds too many conjectures that rest on assumptions supported by possibilities. Likewise, some of his illustrative stories, however sensitively interpreted, impede rather than expedite. his argument. The tale of Estevanico, the shipwrecked hlack slave who became a venerated healer among the Indians, and the account of Squanto, the Indian interpreter and middleman for the settlers of Plymouth, are examples, Both mean to show that evidence of the humanity of hlack and red men lay under the Europeans' eyes if they cared to look. But both could have been dealt with more econom-

Sanders' work sounds an optimistic oote to a world where the color line is still at the center of history. What he says is that racism is oot hred in the booe, but flourishes in some cultural temperatures and not in others. The implication is that it can be changed with circumstances. It is a consummation devoutly to be wished and ooc on which the hope of domestic and international peace for the next generatioo may ultimately rest.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

The diagrammed deal illustrates the difference in evaluation that players may assign to the same cards. Both North-South pairs play identical ranges for one-oo-trump opening bids, "a good 15 to a bad 18 points."

At the first table, South chose to treat his hand as a "bad" 18, devaluing his doubletoo heart queen. He therefore opened one no-trump and everyone passed. After a spade lead and spade continuation when the ace of diamoods was knocked out, he had nine tricks after the queen of clubs fell and a 10th when West discarded a club.

In the replay, South took a rosier view of his cards, one in which most experts would coocur. He decided that the holding of hocors in every suit, honors in combinatioo in three suits, and high intermediate spot-cards qualified his hand as a "good" 18. He therefore bid more aggressively, opening ooe cluh and jumping to two oo-trump over North's ooe-heart response. North, of course, carried on to game. West chose a short-suit lead from his nearly bopeless band, the ten of diamonds. Since his partnership plays that the lead of the ten shows zero or two higher honors in that suit, the appearance of dummy's king made the diamood situation clear to East. He knew that any defensive prospects must lie elsewhere.

South put up the king of diamonds, encouring East to win the trick while he had the least possible informatioo about the deal. East did win the diamood ace, and he paused to consider the hand. Partner was marked with one high card at most, and it seemed likely that East-West's only potential source of tricks was in the heart suit.

Since the only way in which the defenders could take four fast heart tricks was for declarer to hold the doubleton queen and partner ace third. East acted on that premise. He plunked down the king of hearts, led the heart six to West's ace, and his J-9 of hearts were a tenace - and the setting trick over dummy's ten. Note that hearts had to be played io exactly this sequence to defeat three no-trumps. Had East started with a low heart, dummy's ten would have become a fourth-round stopper. On the lead of the jack, declarer could promote the ten by covering with the queen.

McEnroe, Gerulaitis Win in U.S. Tennis

By Barry Lorge

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (WP) — Johan Kriek and Butch Walts, the great presenders in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships, were eliminated yesterday by local lads who suddenly appear to be great contenders; Vitas Gerulaitis and John McEnroe. Gerulaitis. 24, the No.-4 seed who grew up in Brooklyn and Queens and now lives in Kings Point, N.Y., twisted an ankle in the first set last night but showed no ill effects as he routed Kriek, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, in just 86 minutes.

McEnroe, 19, the No- 15 seed from Douglaston, N.Y., became the first teen-ager since Ken Rosewall in the mid-1950s to have reached the semifinals of both the Wimbledon and U.S. championships when be dismanuled Walts, 6-1, 6-2, 7-6, in the afternoon session.

Crowd Sets Record

Last night's crowd of 15,794 at the Louis Armstrong Stadium of the new National Tennis Center was a record for the four years of eveniog play in the tournament. Combined with the matinee crowd of 14,786, it set a new one-day total attendanc record of 30,580.

Gerulaitis, who next plays the winner of today's quarterfinal between Bjorn Borg and Raul Ramirez loss his serve only once, to trail, 1-2, in the first set.

With Kriek serving at 15-30 in the next game, Gerulaitis' right an-kle gave out as he chased a faulted serve. He fell on the court, clutching it, and looked as if he might be finished. Line umpires and hallboys crowded around him, and Kriek - a 20-year-old South African playing in only his second ma-jor tournament — hopped over the net to see how he was,

Gerulaitis got up, walked ginger-for a few seconds, stretebed and flexed the ankle, but showed no further difficulty. A player who re-lies on speed afoot and quickness and agility at the oet, he looked as shots to lose his serve. That was the start of an eightgame slide, during which he lost 13 straight points. He got in only 27 of 71 first serves (a dismal 36 percent) and double-faulted 16 times. He also committed flocks of unforced errors -24 on the forehand, 17 on the backhand, Kriek came through a section of the draw weakened by the defeats of No.-8 seed Sandy Mayer and No. 5 Eddie Dibbs, beating Jai DiLouie, Rick Fagel, Rejean Genois and Brian Teacher. Last night, his "dream draw" turned into a nightmare.

McEnroe, who last year qualified for Wimhledoo and went on to become the youngest semifinalist in the history of the oldest tennis championship, played exceptional-ly well to beat Walts, who was still stiff-legged and a couple of steps slow after his five-set victory over defending champion Guillermo Vi-las Mooday night. That match consumed 4 hours, 11 minutes, on the physically demanding, cement-like

Evert Eliminates Austin

In women's action, Chris Even. 23, scored a quarterfinal vietory yesterday over 15-year-old Tracy Austin.

They have played three times in the last 15 months, and each time Austin has grown a little bigger, a little stronger, a little more formiweighed 90 pounds when they first met in the second round at Wimbledon last year. She is 5-3 and 110

At Wimbledon, on grass, Evert won, 6-1, 6-1.

At Hilton Head Island, S.C., last April, Evert won, 6-3, 6-1, on clay, a surface on which she has won 24 consecutive tournaments and 118 straight matches since the summer of 1973.

Yesterday, on a rubberized as-phalt court that aproximates the cement surfaces on which Austin learned, Evert won again, 7-5, 6-1, missed two backhand approach. The first set was a cautious battle, the second a rapid execution.

Evert is seeded No. 2 this year behind Martina Navranlova, who also advanced to the semifinals yesterday with an impressive 6-3, 6-2 victory over Virginia Ruzici.

"I think I'm playing better with each match," said Evert, who considered Austin an ideal quarterfinal

"This was a pressure match for me because Tracy is a tough competitor. Her menial attitude is so much better than most, and that's what posed a threat to me," said Evert, who admitted she has not watched Austin in the past four months but had read that she as growing stronger, hitting harder and playing more aggressively.

Event now is preparing to meet her contemporary, Navrattlova, 21, who served-and-volleyed ferociously to overwhelm Ruzici.

Reutemann to Join Lotus

LONDON, Sept. 7 (UPI) - The Lotus team announced today that Carlos Reutemann will join Mario Andretti on its Grand Prix Formula 1 team next year.

Reutemann will be the unofficial No. 2 to Andretti, who is on the verge of clinching his first world championship. The Argentinian will replace Sweden's Ronnie Peterson, who is moving to McLaren. The Lotus team has routed the opposition this season, winning eight races and finishing 1-2 in four. Peterson is the only driver in a position to beat Andretti for the world championship in the remaining three races, but he has been given strict instructions to let Andretti win and reportedly s unhappy about playing second fiddle. He deliberately refrained from overtaking Andretti when he could have done so at the Dutch Grand Prix

Reutemann has had an unhappy season at Ferrari, criticizing the selec-tion of tires which he says has let the team down. His most recent victory was at the British Grand Prix in July but he has only cracked the top six in four of this season's 13 races to date.

Ferrari sources said that Reutemann decided to move when Enzo Fer-He was kidding — or, at least, rari signed Jody Scheckter as the leading driver for oext year. morn, it's the Yankees who are came manager on July 29, and with Chicago in June, didn't you hacking into Boston's lead, winning since then they've won 29 of 42 feel that the Yankees were thin, scholarly eyeglasses and said: "I thought they were injured. I also thought that they could make a race of it if their pitchers got healthy. And I thought that no team, not even the Red Sox, could olay .700 ball ferever."

Pitchers Gain Strength

He was right: The Yankee pitchers got healthy, and the Red Sox didn't play .700 ball forever. On July 19, when the Yankees stood 14 games out, Ed Figueroa beat the Minnesota Twins, and the great revival was on, Since then, Ftueroa bas won seven of nine. Catfish Hunter was in drydock with a 32-year-old shoulder that wouldn't pitch. Then he won six straight last month, and medical science wondered. Meanwhile, Guidry was winning 20 of 22 decisions, and he hasn't lost since the Orioles edged him a mooth ago, 2-1.

They were still minus Andy Messersmith and Don Gullett two of the most expensive pitchers bought during Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's frequent shopping sprees. But when the three top starters needed belp, Lemon called to the bullpen for Sparky Lyle or Rich Gossage. Both responded, and Gossage recently saved four games and won another during five consecutive appearances.

They even survived that horren-dous weekend in Baltimore when four games were disrupted by acts of God, who showed oo favoritism. The first and third games were cut short by rain; the second and failure. Both teams naturally blamed the umpires. Howk of Protest

The Orioles howled to high heaven after the first game was called with Hunter leading, 2-1, after 51; innings. The Yankees howled two days later when the third game was called in the seventh inning, just af-ter they had scored five runs, which didn't count.

In the first of the bobtailed games, the umpires waited 2½ hours in a drizzle before playing in a deluge. Hank Peters, general manager of the Orioles, then com-plained: "One mistake compounds another. This crew had the same situation here July 21 when we played Milwaukee. They waited two hours and 20 minutes to resume that game, then it was suspended by the curfew. It was the fourth were delayed by electrical wanted to be consistent, so they did the wroog thing again tonight." Well, if the Yankees lose the race by one game, they can always remember the five runs that got wiped away in Baltimore. But then, the Red Sox can always remember the 212 hours they waited in the rain July 20 in Milwaukee, after which they hlew a three-run lead and lost 11 of their next 14. Forget the past, boys.

Egyptians Put U.S. Drink On Most-Wanted List

By Thomas W. Lippman

AIRO, Sept. 7 (WP) — Extra million bottles, and sales manager men were assigned to ride the Tayeh said production would soon delivery trucks after reported at-tempts to carry off the precious cargo. Merchants who obtained it legitimately sold it as fast as they could display it. Americans with ties to the company got midnight telephone calls from Cabinet ministers asking for special supplies.

The prizes? Bottles of 7-Up, suddealy the hottest commodity in

This country's insatiable thirst for soft drinks, attributable to hot dusty weather, the national sweet tooth and the Moslem ban on alcohol have made 7-Up the most pop-ular American product to be marketed here since diplomatic relations between Egypt and the United States were restored in 1974.

Until June, 7-Up was an unattainable luxury for most Egyptians because it was imported from bot-tling plants abroad and sold at tourist hotels and restaurants for a

Then local production began, at an automated plant on the outskirts of the city that turns out surprised even the company's executives, who launched a major publicity campaign on hillboards, telestreet cut to the equivalent of 7 vision and in the movies that cents a bottle, demand exceeded production almost overnight.

His job is not so much to promote sales, he said, as to make sure that all the distributors get their fair ed from Greece because Egyptian share of the limited supply — a task that required the trucks to break out of circles of would-be clients who were trying to carry the drinks away by the case to meet their customers' demand.

Happy Birthday, Caligula and Others

PARIS (IHT) — Americans in Europe probably don't see the television shows that are so popular at home, among which the most popular are the annual awards doled out to honorably chosen personalities in show business, including special awards to personalities who somehow were ignored in their day, such as the late Charlie Chaplin, who received the televised acclaim of a jam-packed Hollywood theater with amazing grace, as the saying is, a mere two years before he died: Either he hroke down and literally sobbed his profound grautude or he performed doing so. After studying the rerun of this event at the time of his death half a dozen times I was still unable to believe positively that he was not performing. Ordinarily, the awards are not much more than the sensible promotion of extra busi-ness with added income to a personality. and a movie. Then came honors for people in television, and this was pretty much the balf-brother or half-sister of the same business on behalf of movies. Then, came singers and records, rock, country and Western, Blue Grass, and so on. Then came — well, what did come? Well, rivals of the three foregoing, they came, and did just as well at the box office, so to put it, as the originals.

Also, a regular weekly show of one-bour duration in which somebody was "roasted" while the camera fell on the faces of the roasters just as they were open-mouthed with glee about something one of them had said about the honored victim, who demonstrated his good sportsmanship by taking it all sweetly — until it was a torrent of smiling invective upon his no longer gleeful fiendish friends, and elegant enemies. Nobody appeared to be doing anything planned and rehearsed, but nobody was doing anything else, and the camera falling upon the face of Orson Welles baw-having, or Milton Berle smirking, or Joan Rivers appealing to the audience with a gesture of belplessness, the camera compelled even a child to suspect fraudulence all the way down the line.

No Mirth

There was no mirth in anybody's laughter, at all. It was rehearsed, and that is one thing that rehearsal instantly transforms into a hare-faced lie. And sometimes this lying was done by a candidate for president such as Richard Nixon, who also once appeared on "Laugh-In" and repeated the double-entendre and dull chant of "sock it to me," and it seems I also once saw the television star from the Roman Catholic Church whose name escapes me at the moment: a lean-faced man who liked to presume a worldliness that in no wisc canceled out his essential purpose of passing along benedictions to whoever might glance in his direction.

Anybody in show business or church business who was somehow bypassed by the regular shows usually appeared in a special show which was aprly identified as a Special, and one of those that was notable for its all-round inappropriateness was a living memorial to Edward J. Robinson contrived by a dear friend, the busby-haired actor who played for so many years Dr. Somebody in a very popular television series. It is not senility alone that is prevening me from remem-bering the names of everybody I am think-ing about, it is a kind of instinctive defense against being further annoyed by these insa-tiably childish and pathetic people, for they are the national bores, and we must not cheat by leaving some of their names totally concealed: The biggest may very well be Bob Hope.

Phony Legend

Another enormity in the phony legend of heroics is the man who walks sideways as he tries to move forward, apparently the consequence of a helpless imitation of the horses who helped make his legend — John Wayne. the represents quiet homely American strength — but strictly in B movies, even when manufactured by his champion, the director John Ford, who got his style not in imitation of horses but in bomage to wind, which does something deeply evocative in every one of his pictures — lifts and sails a piece of newspaper off the sidewalk into the eye of the camera, with a headline saying something useful to the movie, like Horse Sold to Glue Factory. Abraham Lincoln is said to have enjoyed telling about the drunk who emerged from the tavern at two in the morning and got into the saddle only to find his borse kicking at the stirrup with his left hind leg. This compelled the drunk to remark quite logically. Look here, horse, if you're going to get on, too, I'm going to get

No television program has ever permitted members who are not in show business to celebrate their achievements; and who might these be? Well, it might be in order to reverse the question and ask who might they not be? Locomotive engineers. Cross-country hus drivers. Captains of ships. Engineers highways, bridges, dams. Professors, Medical doctors. Psychiatrists. Floorwalkers. Janitors. Lawyers. Accountants. Farmers. Checkout clerks at supermarkets. Dentists. Government high-rank officers. Gov-ernment low-rank officers. Tax collector audit people, of whom there must be half a million, for I myself have been put in touch with a quarter of a million of them. Gamblers. Bartenders. Headwaiters. Airline pilots, and their helpers out back among the people. And so on and so forth.

I suggest to one or another of the three networks that they look into a slight freshening of their tired honor-paying programs, and give us some straight unapologetic accounting of life among small-town revivalists, for instance—the big-timers pay for their own TV time: Billy Graham, Oral Roberts, and a half dozen others who now and then drop me a line, more or less as follows: Pardner, I was talking to God last night about you. And then goes on and invites me to send in anything from one to one million dollars so that a true University of God may be constructed in the Ozarks. What's the matter with the University of Kentucky is my reply to all such solicitations. I'm not even sure I'm not opposed to those universities, or at any rate to their invariably lifeless and deadly personnel, both administrative and teaching.

Four or five years ago one of the higgest universities began to send me letters to find out if I would be receptive about being granted an honorary degree as a doctor of out if I would be receptive about being granted an honorary degree as a doctor of letters or some such. I replied that I was receptive to the idea of finding out bow such a thing works, but that I did not want an bonorary degree, for I had all of those granted in essence over the years by all of the universities of the world, for my writing itself, not one world of this in official or any other kind of writing, excepting letters from readers. And I asked the president of that university to tell me why I should accept such an honorary degree, which meant leaving my work to travel, being bored for about four hours of official stuff on a stage in front of an audience, and about four full days of social events. The man rather won my heart when he confessed that by doing so I would be doing him a big favor.

We ought to be reminded on television and in newspapers every day that on this day 40 or 60 or 70 years ago so and so was born. Think of it. For instance, Caligula was born in 12 AD, Frederic March in 1897, Ted Williams in 1918, Eldridge Cleaver in 1935. Not to mention Goethe and Dreiser, and you know who. August 31st, for instance, 70 years ago, for instance. Let's have a little indifference about that, in passing. Happy hirthday, old man, or should I say old boy? PEOPLE: Sal A. Mander Leads Sal A. Mander picked up 7 percent of the vote in the Aspen. Colo., mayoral race in 1977, even though his name was ruled off the ballot. This year, he is a candidate for governor in Colorado. His running mate on the Newtist Party slate is G. Turkey Murphy, says Secretary of State Mary Estill Buchanan. She says their nomination pentitions had 588 valid signatures than enough to make tures - more than enough to make the ballot. Sal A. Mander was once newspaper cartoonist Christopher David Cassatt, who won a legal name change after Sal A. Mander - the name of his cartoon character - was struck from the Aspen ballot last year. Murpby may use any nickname he likes on the ballot, the secretary of state says.

Parrott's license number was noted by a parking-lot attendant who saw him driving off with Gonzo, now safely back with its trainer.
